Dear Sir,

Sub: Information about the CLAT 2023 for Your Students,

Greetings from Consortium of National Law Universities,

As you would be aware, the Common Law Admission Test ("CLAT") is conducted by the Consortium of National Law Universities each year for admissions to the five-year undergraduate LL.B. and post-graduate LL.M. programmes at the National Law Universities, as well as several other participating universities. This year, the CLAT is scheduled for Sunday, December 18, 2022.

You would agree that a career in law provides exciting opportunities for young persons, and that the past decades have witnessed a proliferation of professional choices for law students, including in the fields of academia, litigation, corporate law, the administrative services, and business. The CLAT provides students the opportunity to apply for admissions to the best legal education institutions the country through a single examination. The CLAT is a test of aptitude, and does not require the sort of preparation that may distract students from their preparations for the school-leaving examinations. The format and syllabus of the test ensure that the CLAT is accessible for students enrolled across subject areas, including Science, Commerce, Arts, and others. More information about the CLAT 2023 is also available at: <https://consortiumofnlus.ac.in/clat-2023/>

We are keen to ensure that your students are made aware of this opportunity and would be happy to provide detailed information about the CLAT, and about studying law, that your students may find helpful in making their academic and professional choices as they approach their high school graduation. Kindly let us know when we could speak briefly about this, or with whom we could coordinate in your team for this purpose. May we also request that you circulate this letter onwards to the relevant persons in your organisation, and in affiliated schools.

Thanks and best regards,

Prof.(Dr.) Sudhir Krishnaswamy,
Vice-Chancellor, NLSIU, Bangalore
Convenor, CLAT-2023
